EVALEEN HELLINGA

Employment,
Labour &
Contracts
Lawyer

Evaleen Hellinga is a labour and employment lawyer with a keen interest in human rights.

She began her legal career in-house at a large public school board - a large, unionized employer and public service provider. While articling, she supported the board in navigating the COVID-19 pandemic. She also gained experience in human rights, privacy, education, labour and employment matters. After articling, she joined their labour department and dealt with a wide variety of labour issues including employee accommodations, harassment and discrimination complaints, wage entitlements, progressive discipline, terminations, and job posting and promotion disputes under various collective agreements.

Passionate about building and serving communities, Evaleen worked at Parkdale Community Legal Services during law school. She assisted clients with a variety of immigration applications, provided summary advice to community members, and supported collective action around issues affecting the Parkdale community.

Evaleen lives in Toronto with her dog, Layton. She loves exploring Toronto's neighbourhoods and escaping the city to camp, hike and bike when she can. When she can't get outside, you'll find her working on a sewing project or (delicately) demolishing her friends and family in the board game of the day.
